24	Policies and school website: 1. The following policies were reviewed and updated: 2. Benedict's Law is now in force, but having an allergy policy on paper doesn't necessarily mean your school is compliant in practice. Around one in five children are affected by allergies, contributing to more than 500,000 school days lost each year through allergy-related illness and medical appointments. With new statutory requirements now in effect, schools and trusts need to look beyond their policies and ask whether their arrangements actually work day-to-day, and whether they could demonstrate this if challenged. 3. Question – Are staff trained and clear on their responsibilities? An INSET has been held (face to face and online training) and added to the compulsory policies to be read and understood
